Technology that underpins the lifelong learning market

The popularity of online lifelong learning is growing...

- The Australian online learning market alone is valued at around $8 billion¹
- Lifelong learning is a necessity for workers wanting to improve their employability
- Employers want to up-skill and re-skill their staff
- COVID-19 has accelerated the pace of this already occurring process
- Governments are encouraging shorter, flexible courses
- Acceptance of micro-credentials is increasing and more providers are beginning to offer them

And a new kind of delivery platform for the lifelong learning market is needed...

- Lifelong learning is primarily offered by universities, higher education providers, vocational education providers and industry bodies
- Mainly comprised of traditional online courses delivered via Zoom/Teams, email and PDF documents
- Only 68.5% of people rated their postgraduate coursework experience as positive in recent surveys¹
- Working professionals expect modern technology platforms and engaging experiences
- How can these courses be delivered more effectively?

Pioneering a highly scalable model for program delivery in the lifelong learning market

Overview

- Partnerships with top institutions to deliver programs
- Capabilities across full spectrum of program delivery, including learning design, technology, learning platform, teaching, online facilitation, support and assessment
- Demonstrated by UNSW Transition Program Online (TPO)
- CS101 and technology-focused micro-credentials recently launched late 2021

A different approach to Online Program Delivery (OPM)

¹. OPM stands for Online Program Management, OPM providers work with education institutions to take their academic programs online.

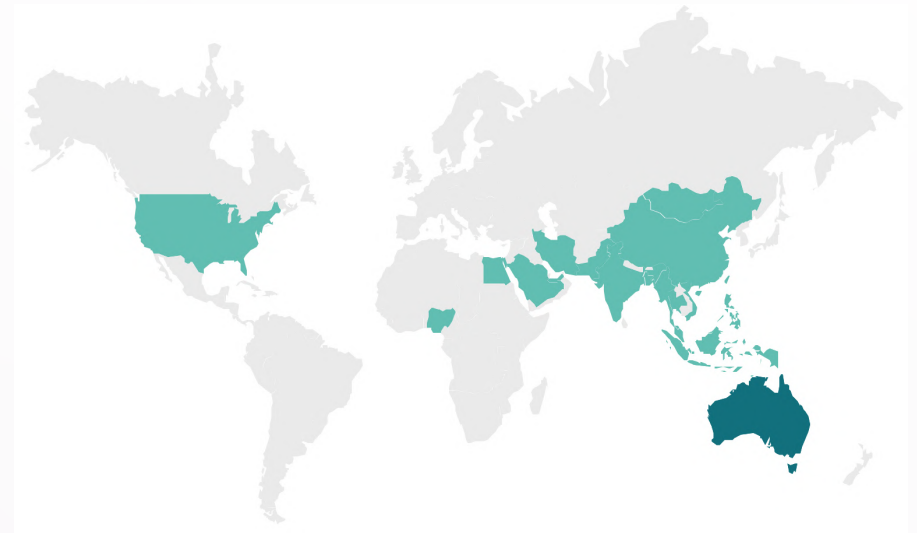

Successful launch in FY21

- Successfully launch of UNSW TPO in FY21, attracting over 100 students across 4 intakes, substantial revenue contribution
- About 86% of students receiving an offer from UNSW after completing TPO
- Revenue from the program exceeded investment within its 1st year of operation
- Formally recognised by seven other universities across Australia, U.K. and New Zealand

Scale and continuous improvement in FY22

- Five intakes scheduled for FY22
- Working with UNSW Global to increase the number of universities recognising the program
- Aim to be the market leader by growing enrolments and continuous improvement

Attracting international students across the globe

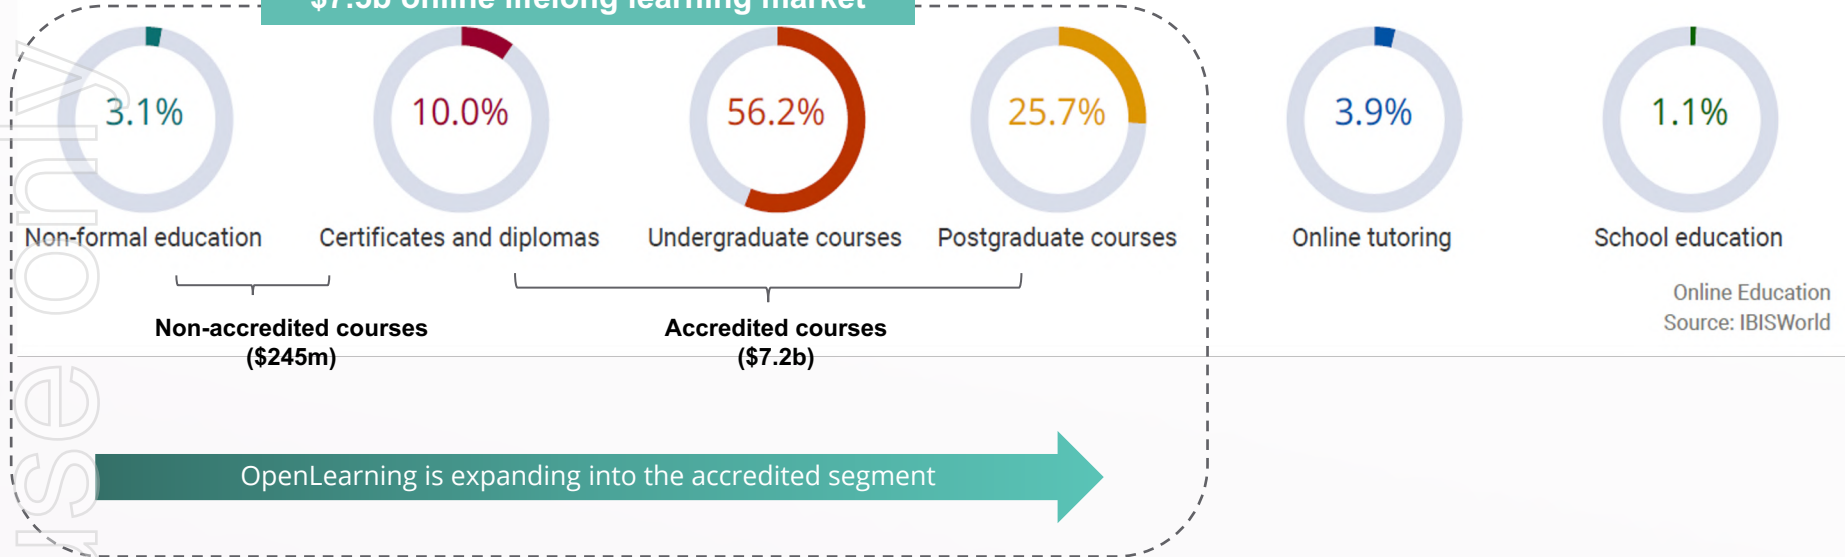

■ Including students who have paid or received offers

Growth strategy and investment thesis

Platform Subscription

Focusing on account management with large institutional clients to grow usage and increase subscription value

Expanding addressable market to RTOs and private education providers in Australia and Malaysia, and leveraging organic traffic in the U.S. to increase new SaaS clients

Self-service usage-based SaaS model utilising Stripe and enabling inside sales to drive sales efficiency

Program Delivery

Increasing the number of recognition partners for the UNSW Transition Program Online to increase enrolment

Entering into corporate upskilling market with CS101 and other tech-focused micro-credentials

Piloting CS101 licensing model with university partners

- COVID-19 pandemic accelerates growth in online learning
- Strong leverage to benefit from ongoing growth in the lifelong learning market
- The value workers and employers place on upskilling continues to build
- Prior investment in the platform and new products have started to pay back
- SaaS business model delivers increasing returns at scale
- Growing number of partners makes the program delivery model highly scalable

OpenLearning is now building scale ...
... led by strong growth in Platform Subscription and Program Delivery segments
