Mark Allison to continue as Managing Director and CEO

Elders Limited (ASX:ELD) announces that after a comprehensive domestic and international search, the Board of Directors of Elders has agreed with Mr Mark Allison that he continue in the role of Managing Director and Chief Executive Officer of Elders.

Elders' Chair, Ian Wilton, said, "We are very fortunate that we have been able to agree with Mark that he will now not retire from Elders and secure his continued service. This is an ideal outcome for Elders, its customers, employees and shareholders. Mark's deep experience and understanding of Elders and agriculture both domestically and globally makes his continued service ideal for Elders." Mr Wilton highlighted the importance of retaining Mr Allison's experience and knowledge as the company continues its systems modernisation and supply chain rationalisation projects. He added that the current CEO succession program will continue to focus on the development of suitable candidates.

Mr Allison said, "I am delighted to continue in my role as Managing Director and CEO of Elders. While I had been intending to retire from Elders, it was never my intention to cease serving the interests of Australian agriculture, and this country's farmers, after my departure. As a result, I was very pleased to accept the Board's invitation to continue in my role and am energised by the prospect of building on the hard work we have already done at Elders during my tenure."

Mr Allison noted that the Board will continue to work with him to develop the strong pipeline of talent in Elders' senior leadership team.

The terms of Mr Allison's continued employment are set out in Appendix A.
