PORTFOLIO REVIEW

The Glennon Small Companies portfolio fell (-4.27%) in October, outperforming its benchmark (S&P/ASX Small Ordinaries Accumulation Index), which fell (-5.45%). At month end, approximately 30.92% of the portfolio was held in cash or cash equivalents. Over the past 4 months, the portfolio has returned -2.90% against the benchmark return of (-7.28%).

October saw a broad-based sell-off in small and micro-cap companies. Our high cash weighting helped with small caps falling 5.45% during the month. Liquidity in the smaller end of the market is greatly reduced from 12 months ago. There is some good value now in small, micro and nano caps and we have been selectively deploying some of our cash.

The main contributor to performance was Revolver Resources (+21.05%) which was absent from any news and retracing some of the ground it has lost of the past few months.

The main detractors from performance were Coronado Global Resources (-11%), Metgasco (-17%) and Telix Pharmaceuticals (-22%).
