Commentary

The Company generated a strong return of 5.73% (post-tax) during September 2024, handily outperforming the MSCI Commodity Producers Index which was down 2.3% in AUD terms. Commodities generally recovered from the weakness in August, with bulk commodities iron ore and coking coal up 8% and 14% respectively, while copper was up 6% and aluminium up 8%. Crude oil was the key exception, down 6% on renewed concerns around OPEC spare production capacity. Key contributors to performance were Base Metals (+2.67%), Battery Metals (+1.7%) and Uranium (+3.33%). The outperformance of key portfolio names such as Capstone, Teck Resources, Alcoa and Alpha HPA also explains the performance differential with the MSCI Commodity Producers Index which is heavily dominated by mega-cap integrated oil companies and large miners such as BHP and Rio Tinto.

September saw significant volatility as 'fast money' flows and dramatic swings in sentiment whipped the market around. Ongoing concerns regarding Chinese economic activity and, by extension, the Chinese property market led to renewed selling pressure, while short sellers also further pressured the resources stocks. Interestingly, copper did not suffer the same degree of selling pressure, indicating speculative traders already positioned for weakness there. September's early weakness was reversed by three key catalysts over the month. As we noted last month, weak commodity prices eventually lead to a supply response, and in September we saw integrated Chinese battery producer CATL cut production at one of China's largest lithium mines triggering a bounce in lithium stocks. Mid-month also saw the first rate cut from the US Federal Reserve. While well telegraphed, it served to remind the market that one of the key beneficiaries of lower rates and a weaker US dollar will be the resources sector. Later in the month, China announced a fresh stimulus package of both monetary and fiscal policy measures. Given the starting point of almost universal bearishness, these announcements triggered a substantial bounce in resources markets.

The somewhat panicked response is emblematic of long only investors being underweight and hedge funds being significantly short the sector. We have spoken for some time of the crowding of bearish positioning being an opportunity in this sector. The lack of significant impactful stimulus measures to this point from the Chinese government left many market participants disappointed with a seeming lack of desire or urgency to act. These latest announcements indicate a clear intention to address the weak property market, while also prompting a recovery in Chinese consumer spending. With this as a backdrop, along with the typically strong Q4 seasonality of the resources sector, key portfolio names like Anglo American, Teck Resources, Freeport-McMoRan, Capstone, Alcoa and Boss Resources will benefit as and when buying interest accelerates in the resources sector.
